It is suggested that bachelors shall be compelled by law to entitle themselves "Master," and when married they may be known as "Mister."

The Henpecks sat one evening—the day's hard tasks were done.
Henpeck removed the apron from his vest;
He'd straightened up the table, washed the dishes one by one
And now he settled down to have a rest.
He waited for the paper, which Mrs. Henpeck read;
She reached some news that filled her with delight—
"Call bachelors all 'Master'; the proper plan," she said.
And Henpeck, nodding sagely, vowed: "That's right!"

"The men," said Mrs. Henpeck, "too long have had full sway,
And bachelors must be identified;
So long as they're unmarried, a tax they ought to pay
And sign their names to show their class, besides."
Then Henpeck kept on darning the socks,
To pass the while,
And, leaning down to get a better light,
Or possibly to keep her from noticing his smile,
He said, with meek expression: "Yes, that's right."

Then Henpeck sought the kitchen, and set the bread to rise,
And put the oatmeal properly to soak.
And while he did his duty he mused between his sighs:
"I only hope she doesn't see the joke."
She called to him, serenely: "Dear, are the windows locked?"
And have you got things cleared off for the night?"
He came and took the paper, and, "Mister!" then he mocked—
But very sotto voce—"Well, that's right."

SOUR DROPS.

We often have wondered what psychological impulse tells some women when to laugh at the theater.
A man who is under 20 or over 40 finds it hard to understand why there should be anything except soubrettes on the stage.
Folks who adopt music as a profession may not be said to have a hold on fame until they have caused the postponement of a concert because of their illness.
Some people go around missing trains just because it gives them a chance to boast of their absent-mindedness.
The man who takes you to one side and tells you that he is simply crazy because of his love for some girl, is simply crazy.
Love makes the world go 'round—but two drinks of rye will give it a perceptible whirl, according to Kentucky theorists.
A man will make more excuses for being fired than his boss does for firing him.
The man who stands on the street corner and ogles women is usually the one who applauds the loudest at the play when the hero tells the villain to unhands the girl.
Some men are mean enough to make scrap books of baby food pictures and preserve them to show to the victims in about 15 or 18 years.

Diplomacy.
"We must give up the open-door policy, I am afraid," says the first diplomat.
"And why?" demands the second.
"The Ambassador from Kishewoo will not agree to our plans, and you know the whole open door idea hinges upon his decision."
"Hinges on it, does it?" asks the second one. "Hinges on it? Tell you what we'll do. We'll make it a sliding door. See?"
Thus was shirt sleeved statecraft given another great impetus.

A More Tyro.
"You are flirting terribly; I do not like it," said the indignant wife.
"But, my dear," begged the poor husband, "you must be lenient with me. Remember, this is my first attempt at flirting. I'll do better as I get in practice."

Excellent Site.
"A glorious site!"
The person at our elbow waxed enthusiastic over Niagara Falls.
"A wondrous sight!" he said.
"I said site!" he explained. "Am looking for a new location for my dairy."

Telephone Talks No. 4 THAT WORD "HELLO"

If you and every other Bell Telephone subscriber in this country would answer the telephone by giving the name, as "John Smith talking", instead of saying "Hello!", a million and a half hours of time would be saved every year.

Six billion connections are made over Bell Telephones every year. A second economized on each call by dropping the "Hello!" would mean six billion seconds, a hundred million minutes, a million and a half hours, or 455 days saved every year. This tremendous time saving and consequent reduction in operating expenses could be applied to the betterment of the service.

The most agreeable mode of beginning a telephone conversation, and the method we recommend, because it saves useless words and avoids misunderstanding and consequent irritation, and is at the same time courteous and direct, runs thus:

The telephone bell rings, and the person answering says: "Brown's residence; John Brown talking", or Woods & Company; Mr. Jones speaking."
